SGA investigates food concerns...

Vegetarian meals will be offered

Melissa Chaffin
Senate Reporter

Concerns about Professional Food Management were food for thought for both senators and administrators after the administrative forum.

In Thursday's Student Government Association meeting, Vice President Travis Crites reported he had begun investigating food concerns brought out at the administrative forum.

After looking into the situation, Crites recommended utilizing the existing food committee, rather than form a committee from SGA.

A food committee comprised of members from the Residence Hall Association meets every other week with Greg Morrow, PFM director.

Crites said Morrow is very interested in student concerns and has begun to make changes from the recommendations he received.

Morrow will be distributing a survey in McMindes Hall this week to solicit feedback from PFM diners.

Now that he is aware of the need for vegetarian diets, Crites said PFM will be offering a vegetarian assortment for every meal.

Beginning next year, residents will be able to mark their preference for vegetarian meals on their residential life contracts.

In new business, student senate passed Resolution No. 95/F/110 to appoint one senator from each of the four colleges to a task force to investigate the issue of grade inflation.

Sen. Greg Schwartz, Hays junior, presented the resolution in an attempt to better represent SGA opinion on the task force.

A similar resolution was passed Oct. 26, which appointed two senators to the task force.

Senators, however, did not feel the two senators selected were an accurate representation of SGA popular opinion.

According to the resolution passed Thursday, these four students represent each college; two students will serve on the committee and the other two will serve as advisory members.

Those students are Chad Nelson, Lincoln junior, College of Arts & Sciences; Dennis Albright, Hays sophomore, College of Business; Amber Jorgenson, Beloit junior, College of Health & Life Sciences; and Melanie Peters, Albert junior, College of Education.

SGA also appropriated $100 to Galen Schawe, Dodge City senior. Schawe has been selected as a candidate for the Jeopardy College Championship. He will be flying to Chicago to take an entrance exam on Nov. 19.

For whom the bugle calls

Kari Sparks
Staff Writer

When Wild Bill Hickock was the lawman of Hays, and Buffalo Bill Cody hunted buffalo for the U.S. Army fort, Fort Hays, the bugle calls which regulated the soldiers' activities could be heard throughout what was once "the Boot Hill of Kansas," Bob Wilhelm, superintendent of Fort Hays State Historic Site, said.

The calls heard in Hays then can still be heard in Hays today.

Listening closely in the quiet of the early morning, the distant sound of a bugle can be heard on campus.

At 7:10 a.m. the bugle call, "reveille" is broadcast from the Fort Hays

State Historic Site, located south of FHSU.

From the morning "wake-up" call to "taps," a military "lights out" signal, 17 other bugle calls are played every day, Wilhelm said.

According to Wilhelm, the recordings were made in the early 1900s by an authentic military bugler.

"The calls are on the same schedule the soldiers went by on Nov. 22, 1870.

"The army, being very regimented, documented everything," Wilhelm said.

All records from Fort Hays, active during the Indian wars from 1867 to 1889, are now part of the national archives in Washington, D.C..

However, Wilhelm said microfilm copies are kept at the Fort Hays State Historic Site.

"Since there were no intercoms then, the calls let everyone on post know what was going on.

"The soldiers would have to recognize the calls by sound," Wilhelm said.

The most interesting call, according to Wilhelm, is "tattoo," played at 8:30 p.m.

Originated in Europe during the Thirty Years War, it was a signal to "turn the taps to," and quit your night's beer drinking.

Fort Hays used it as a signal to get

Experimental Aircraft Association forms new chapter in Hays

Kathy Hanson
Staff Writer

For some people, gazing at the sky evokes visions of what has occurred in the great wide open air. For others, the sky creates dreams of what is yet to come.

A local chapter of the national organization Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) recently formed in Hays.

Anyone is welcome to join the group which meets on the first Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. in the Hays Airport Meeting room. Dues for the group are $10.

Stecklein encourages anyone interested in aviation to join the newly formed EAA. He said, "It is not limgeneral aviation."

The first official meeting was Nov. 1. Stecklein said he was pleased with Business plans at the first meeting centered around the process of setting up a local chapter. According to na-

After business matters were discussed, members began sharing their plans and ideas. Stecklein said several members already have projects in the building process.

"Sometimes there is a design that calls for welding or woodwork. If the builder doesn't know how to do these things, there are others in EAA who have that knowledge.

Half-mast flags pay tribute to slain Israeli leader

Jessica Sadowsky
Copy Editor

The flags at Fort Hays State have been flying half-mast since Saturday in honor of the death of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Provost Adolfo Arévalo said the university is flying the flags at half-mast because "President Clinton has requested it."

"Israel is a country we've been working close with for many years and it is significant to honor (Rabin's) peace efforts."

"Israel is a country that has been supportive of the United States and the United States has been supportive of their efforts," Arévalo said.

Hundreds of thousands of mourners came from all over the shocked and saddened country of Israel to a courtyard in front of the Israeli parliament to pay their respects following Rabin's death. The vigil continued all night Sunday until the start of a state funeral yesterday attended by dozens of world leaders, including President Clinton.

Even as Israelis mourned, they tried to grasp the enormity of the upheaval thrust upon their country when a Jewish opponent of Rabin's peacemaking gunned him down.

"I feel that half the country has died," high school student Pini Cohen said as he and a group of friends huddled and lighted candles.

Rabin's assassination at a pro-peace rally in Tel Aviv on Saturday night stunned a nation which, despite increasingly bitter divisions over peacemaking with the Arabs, had somehow denied such violence could happen to them.

The suspect, Yigal Amir, a 27-year-old law student with links to the Jewish extremist fringe, told interrogators he wanted to stop Rabin's peace policies. He reportedly said his actions were based on rabbinical rulings which permit Jews to kill people who gave away parts of the biblical Land of Israel.

Rabin's death raised immediate questions about the future of Middle East peacemaking, especially the Israel-PLO autonomy agreement on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from most West Bank towns and villages by the end of the year.

Some delays were possible as Rabin's successor, Shimon Peres, puts together a caretaker government.

Dubbed "Mr. Security," Rabin was the one politician Israelis trusted to take the risks involved along the rocky path toward peace.

His peacemaking with the PLO earned him the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize, along with Peres and PLO chief Yasser Arafat. But the political climate had turned unprecedentedly venomous in recent months, and Rabin became the target of increasing vitriol by Israel's right wing, which called him a traitor and compared him to a Nazi.

A stunned nation tried to come to grips with the killing Sunday. "Rabin Murdered, Israel is hurting and crying," read the headline in the Yediot Achronot newspaper.

"Rabin was looking to the future. He was looking out for us, the younger generation," Amir Shavit, an 18-year-old from Tel Aviv said. "They killed him. They killed my hope."

Rabin's coffin, draped with the blue-and-white flag bearing the Star of David, was driven slowly from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem Sunday, through the rocky, eternal hills. Thousands of cars were parked along the highway as Israelis strained to catch a glimpse.

The coffin was placed on a black bier in the plaza outside the parliament. Rabin's widow, Leah, supported by her son, Yuval, and daughter Dalia, slowly walked toward the coffin. From time to time, she buried her tear-stained face in her hands, and slumped on Yuval's shoulder.

Yuval quietly recited the Kaddish, or prayer for the dead.

Rabin's funeral also was to bring to Jerusalem Jordan's King Hussein and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt - two Arab leaders who have not visited the disputed city, claimed by the Palestinians as a future capital. An official visit to Jerusalem is seen by the Arab world as recognition of the city as Israel's capital.

Editorial

The death of Yitzhak Rabin, Israel's prime minister, came as a shock to nations around the world (see story pg. 1).

I remember waking Sunday morning in Washington, D.C., and wondering why the flags outside my hotel window were at half-mast.

I knew someone had died, but it wasn't until I reached the airport an hour later that I remembered the flags and caught a glimpse of a Washington Post headline.

Israeli's leader, committed to a peace creating process, had been gunned down by a man who justified his actions stating his religion permitted it.

Why had Rabin been gunned down? Suspected gunman Yigal Amir, a 27-year-old law student, said Rabin had wanted to "give our country to the Arabs."

Amir said, as a Jew, he was permitted to kill if parts of the biblical Land of Israel were given away.

So Rabin was assassinated in the name of a promised land? What a shocking and very frightening thought.

To halt attempts at peace, a concept surely any religion's "god" would support, was lower on the scale of priorities than that of a promised land.

The sacredness of the land is not a secret. The deeply embedded importance of this land for the Jewish is well-known.

But land at the price of lives and peace is a concept which perhaps the western world may never understand. I know that I do not.

When will the hatred and killing cease? At what price should history and land be placed?

In this case, it was at the price of possible peace and the life of a great man who will be remembered for years. to come.

Letters to the Editor

Reader finds the one permanent solution to all of life's problems

Dear Editor:

Got a cold? Take a pill. Feeling stressed? Buy this. Relationship problems? Attend here.

Sound like common theories heard everyday in society? You betcha! We have a matrix of "solutions" out there to fix anything, anyplace and anyone. The materialism of the world has created more problems than solutions.

These solutions are responses to what I term "ISM's." Sexism, racism, gayism, moneyism, drugism, alcoholism and lifeism. The "ISM" is an acronym for "I, self and me."

We are in the realms of looking at others' faults and not our own. We live in a world which focusses on negativity and not positivity. We try to get away from our own problems by focusing on others' problems in a negative way. We act as if we are the central figures of the world and by way of us, the solutions can be found. I don't agree.

I am a recovered alcoholic and addict. My problems were not the alcohol, drugs, sex, money or material possessions. They were my solutions.

I got caught up in the quick fix realm of today's modern world. Where did it get me? A quick trip to a living nightmare. And within this nightmare, I sought out more solutions to the problems I found there, bringing me deeper and deeper into a pit of confusion.

There are numerous texts out there with "solutions" to problems. We read them, study them and try to apply them to our lives. Yes, the feelings of release come, but only temporarily.

The problems eventually come back, and thus more "solutions" are sought. I tried many of these, and the result was just described. Temporary!

A couple of weekends ago, I was able to attend a fellowship retreat on Schooley's Mountain in Chester, N.J. there, I found the REAL solution I had been looking for all my life. No 30cc of heroin, cocaine or liquid can equal this solution (for me, that is).

Do you know what the number one selling book in the world is? Hint: It has been on the No. 1 list for more than 100 years.

true answer to problems.

Last weekend, I pulled mine down, dusted it off and found what I needed. A real solution. One which is guaranteed. One which brought me into this world and which will now take me out.

I am not trying to tell anyone what to think, feel, or react to. That's not my place. I am just making a suggestion. Passing on some information (solutions) to problems which I have encountered.

So, if you haven't read this text, take a gander at it. If it works, the solutions will come at no material cost. If it doesn't, well, then there are other solutions to turn back to. Take a gamble. We do it every day! Oh, if you need the answer, give me a call.

Reader disagrees with letter refuting members of Generation X

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to the letter written by Levi Erickson, and published in the Oct. 31 issue. First, Levi, you state you put no faith in any of the "hype" surrounding Generation X, nor wear Generation X as a badge. To continue, you announced you do not seek out that which caters to Generation X, nor watch Generation X television.

Your reason for this is you are not a Generation Xer. I hate to be the one to break this to you, but you are being extremely hypocritical.

I will use two examples from your own letter to prove this to you. First, you state you listen to "punk" music. This type of music is promoted by and a product of Generation X. "Punk" music became popular as Generation X was entering its teenage years in the middle of the 1980s. Our purchasing of these records, tapes and CD's is the reason this type of music has been promoted by the corporate recording studios of America. Therefore, probably without your knowledge, you have been buying into this so-called "hype" which is Generation X.

Secondly, you state "Generation X is a chronological term which has been applied to describe the peoples born about 1971 to 1979." Later you go on to say you are 21 years of age. Now, correct me if I am mistaken, but that would put you in the middle of this timeline. You are a Gen. Xer by your own statement. A chronological term cannot describe anything. It is a term applied to a period of time in which certain events happened. In the case of the Gen Xers, it is applied to the individuals who were born between the years of 1971 and 1979.

One final note, Levi, you offend me greatly with the statement about the "flakes waling around Hays with body piercing." I happen to be one of these, as you label them, "flakes." Let me tell you something, ignorant people disgust me. And it is fatally obvious you are being extremely ignorant in this statement. I am pleased with the fact I do not know you. But let me make one suggestion to you before you write your next letter to the editor.

Make sure you educate yourself and open your eyes before you intend to point fingers or judge people.

Generation X

Rebecca Schwerdtfeger
Editor/Columnist

I heard an advertisement on the radio today which I found somewhat interesting.

It had a member of Generation X explaining how generations consider themselves so different and yet, we are not.

The person went on to say when her mother's generation were teenagers, her grandmothers generation found it strange that the teenagers would iron their hair.

She said the same is still true today, but applies to our parents finding us hard to believe because our style vary from those prior to ours.

The commercial was much more craftily worded, but the storyteller left the listener with a certain feeling. It was a circular feeling. One of continuity and harmony, despite differences between the generations.

She said Generation X was not a new concept and I think that was an important point to make.

We all come from different times and our time periods all carry their own titles as given by society.

And yet, the reality behind the theory of "generations" is quite simple.

"Generations" refers to the different time periods we develop our identity in and our environments during that time.

It does not refer to our differences between the generations, but the similarity of our struggles to create an identity within our own times.

Perhaps Generation X would perfectly describe any generation.

As technology, lifestyles, families and societies are changing rapidly and drastically, we may have reached the a stage with this generation in which these changes are surpassing the rate at which we can adjust and develop our own identities as did our predecessors.

It was a Blue Cross/Blue Shield advertisement, but it centered around the concept of members of all generations being equal, but different. I like the image that conveys.

Non-Traditional

Dina Ross
Columnist

Sometimes I walk home from my substitute teaching job and in those times I reflect on my blessings.

I communicate with nature as I listen to the chirping of birds and marvel at the beauty of the flowers and the butterflies.

The fresh Kansas wind caresses my face, although it rumples my not-so-well-done hair.

As a non-traditional person, the economy is the main factor behind everything I do.

I am frugal in my use of transportation as well.

By not driving, I save gas, insurance, car payments, tags, maintenance, tickets sound equipment, car wash supplies, etcetera.

At least these are my excuses for my reluctance to drive.

In my walks alone, I have met the most wonderful people, and that is a blessing for my wandering soul.

I would like to share some of the thoughts which come to my mind as I tramp the paths of solitude.

A few reasons why I walk rather than drive

- Promenading is good for my heart and spirit.

- To smile at strangers without feeling silly.

- People seem impressed when I say I walk for exercise.

- I like to see people twist their necks 180 degrees while driving.

- So I can hear the pleasing words "Do you need a ride?"

- To practice my "No, thanks anyway" line.

- To practice my endurance in case I walk "El camino de Santiago" in the future.

- It is always a good excuse to be late for class.

- Parallel parking? No problem for me.

- Alleys are very interesting.

- Addresses are easy to find.

- I ponder new ideas for my column.

"There are a lot of resources to be spread around. We would also like to help host fly-ins at the airport and bring in air shows and performance groups," Stecklein said.

Jim Hinkhouse, professor of art, is a member of both the national and local EAA. He said members are welcome to bring in parts of their projects such as plans and blueprints.

Hinkhouse said a lot of "intercommunication between people with similar interests" takes place at the meetings.

"There are quite a few in the area who are building and can learn so much from other members," Hinkhouse said.

Hinkhouse is working on an aircraft design which he plans to scale down for creation of a radio controlled model. This method allows him to work out his concept and test it on a model while saving some money.

The group's origin came from Stecklein and several friends who were interested in building an airplane. He said, "Many of us had past projects that we had not finished, so we decided to form an EAA chapter in Hays."

Stecklein feels EAA is a beneficial group because it supports the "small guy" who is interested in general aviation. The EAA also lobbies to keep laws from being passed which restrict private pilots from using air space.

"The EAA is a wonderful resource on how to build aircraft and where to get materials for it," he said.

Stecklein added, "It's new territory for us. What we want to do is help members achieve their goals in aviation."

Wilhelm said a full schedule of the bugle calls, along with a description can be picked up at the museum, located at 1472 Hwy. 183.

Wilhelm said what remains of Fort Hays, two officer's buildings, a blockhouse and a guardhouse are visited by more than 50 thousand people a year.

"People do not realize that Kansas has a lot of history, especially in the Hays area.

"A lot of times history is thought of as a boring subject in school, but once you find out about the people and places, it's exciting," Wilhelm said.

Wilhelm also said anyone who likes meeting people and learning about history is encouraged to volunteer as tour guides or help with events.

Tigers soar to new heights; Chadron Eagles crash land with 47-5 loss

Marc Menard
Staff Writer

The season for the Fort Hays State football team will come down to one game as the Tigers crushed the Chadron State Eagles 47-5 Saturday.

The win sets up the showdown for the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference Championship this weekend between the Tigers and Western State.

FHSU is now 8-1-1 overall, while Western State is 7-2 on the season. Both teams are 6-0 in RMAC play.

"This is the win we wanted. It's what we have worked for all season. To be one of the two teams left playing for the championship," Head Coach Bob Cortese said.

The Tigers, who won their seventh consecutive game, did it in the same fashion as they have for most of the season: Quarterback Shawn Behr through the air, tailback Clint Bedore on the ground, a stingy defense and opportunistic special teams play.

Two of Behr's four touchdown tosses went to flanker Lance Schwindt, who continues to assault the Tiger record books.

The two Schwindt touchdown receptions now give him 12 for the season, breaking Tyrone Tracy's single-season record of 10 set in 1989.

Schwindt's second touchdown, a 32 yard reception from Behr in the third quarter also put him in the record books for single season receiving yardage.

Schwindt now has 1,025 receiving yards.

The special teams and defense continue to be key factors in the success of the Tigers this season.

A blocked punt by freshman kicker

Scott Karl was recovered by junior Jason Flax in the end zone, giving the Tigers a 13-0 lead in the first quarter.

In the third quarter, the Tigers applied swarming pressure to Eagles punter Lynn Wendelin and tackled him at the 30, leading to another score giving Fort Hays a 27-5 lead early in the second half.

"Our defense and special teams played well today," Cortese said. "But, they have played well in a lot of games this year."

The defensive performance was perhaps particularly satisfying for FHSU defensive coordinator Scott Noble.

Noble, a former defensive coordinator at Chadron State, had a humbling experience at the hands of his former team last year.

The Tigers gave up 38 unanswered points and lost a chance at the RMAC championship, losing 52-21.

"It was a pretty important game for Scott I know. They beat us bad up there last year. He wanted this game for sure," Cortese said.

"We take pride in what we are doing. If we can give Behr protection and the guys are catching the ball down field, then we know we're doing our job. It is a team game, it takes an effort by everybody," senior offensive lineman Woody Bryant said.

"This is it. This is the biggest week of our season. I'm sure getting motivated will not be a problem this week," Behr said.

It's down to Fort Hays State and Western State and according to Cortese, this is when the fun begins.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2 p.m. Central Standard Time Saturday at Western, Gunnison, Colo., Saturday.

COMMERCE ON CAMPUS

Hungry? No problem with your University Card.

Next time you dream of a giant Taco Supreme (from the Taco Shop, of course) take your Fort Hays State University Card instead of cash or checks. It's the safe, easy way to access your University Card account to make off-campus purchases at participating merchants (just look for their University Card window sticker).

Of course, The University Card also offers a full menu of convenience on campus, from bookstore purchases to food and laundry services. You can use it at the photocopy machine, in campus vending machines, and more. All off-campus transactions are debited directly from your account, and detailed on a monthly statement.

The University Card even doubles as a long distance AT&T calling card...acts as your school library card...and functions as a universal ATM card, giving you 24-hour access to your account in Hays and around the world.

So add a little spice to your life: order up the convenience of The University Card. To sign up, just stop by the local Commerce Bank branch next door to the University Card office.
